

2014 英语 (一) Part A · Text 1

文章主题	通读后用一句话自行概括
限时阶段	18-22 分钟：先看题干，不看选项；读文不查词
笔译阶段	按段笔译、按段核对；先写粗译，不追求参考译文式中文
重做阶段	全文核对完成后，统一重做 21-25 题
第二天	遮住译文重读、重做题、复查错因与替换词

连续干净原文用于真实检测；笔译原文用于逐段输出；原文修改页用于在英文上订正。答案与解析请对照纸质版。

限时第一读：先看 5 个英文题干，不看选项

No.	Question stem - English only	Signal
21	George Osborne's scheme was intended to
22	The phrase "to sign on" (Para. 2) most probably means
23	What prompted the chancellor to develop his scheme?
24	According to Paragraph 3, being unemployed makes one feel
25	To which of the following would the author most probably agree?

标出生词但不停下；标出转折/因果/让步；读到相关段落才回来看选项。

我的英文题干导航标记

干净原文 A：限时读文

现在开始计时。此处没有结构、词义或逻辑提示；读到相应段落，就做相应题目。

[P1] In order to "change lives for the better" and reduce "dependency," George Osborne, Chancellor of the Exchequer, introduced the "upfront work search" scheme. Only if the jobless arrive at the jobcentre with a CV, register for online job search, and start looking for work will they be eligible for benefit—and then they should report weekly rather than fortnightly. What could be more reasonable?

[P2] More apparent reasonableness followed. There will now be a seven-day wait for the jobseeker's allowance. "Those first few days should be spent looking for work, not looking to sign on," he claimed. "We're doing these things because we know they help people stay off benefits and help those on benefits get into work faster." Help? Really? On first hearing, this was the socially concerned chancellor, trying to change lives for the better, complete with "reforms" to an obviously indulgent system that demands too little effort from the newly unemployed to find work, and subsidises laziness. What motivated him, we were to understand, was his zeal for "fundamental fairness"—protecting the taxpayer, controlling spending and ensuring that only the most deserving claimants received their benefits.

[P3] Losing a job is hurting: you don't skip down to the jobcentre with a song in your heart, delighted at the prospect of doubling your income from the generous state. It is financially terrifying, psychologically embarrassing and you know that support is minimal and extraordinarily hard to get. You are now not wanted; you are now excluded from the work environment that offers purpose and structure in your life. Worse, the crucial income to feed yourself and your family and pay the bills has disappeared. Ask anyone newly unemployed what they want and the answer is always: a job.

[P4] But in Osborneland, your first instinct is to fall into dependency—permanent dependency if you can get it—supported by a state only too ready to indulge your falsehood. It is as though 20 years of ever-tougher reforms of the job search and benefit administration system never happened. The principle of British welfare is no longer that you can insure yourself against the risk of unemployment and receive unconditional payments if the disaster happens. Even the very phrase "jobseeker's allowance" is about redefining the unemployed as a "jobseeker" who had no fundamental right to a benefit he or she has earned through making national insurance contributions. Instead, the claimant receives a time-limited "allowance," conditional on actively seeking a job; no entitlement and no insurance, at $71.70 a week, one of the least generous in the EU.

2.2

第一次做题：作答 21-25 题

现在才看选项。先独立完成五道题；需要时回原文定位。

21. George Osborne's scheme was intended to

- [A] motivate the unemployed to report voluntarily.
- [B] provide the unemployed with easier access to benefits.
- [C] encourage jobseekers' active engagement in job seeking.
- [D] guarantee jobseekers' legitimate right to benefits.

22. The phrase "to sign on" (Para. 2) most probably means

- [A] to register for an allowance from the government.
- [B] to accept the government's restrictions on the allowance.
- [C] to check on the availability of jobs at the jobcentre.
- [D] to attend a governmental job-training program.

23. What prompted the chancellor to develop his scheme?

- [A] A desire to secure a better life for all.
- [B] An eagerness to protect the unemployed.
- [C] An urge to be generous to the claimants.
- [D] A passion to ensure fairness for taxpayers.

24. According to Paragraph 3, being unemployed makes one feel

- [A] insulted.
- [B] uneasy.
- [C] enraged.
- [D] guilty.

25. To which of the following would the author most probably agree?

- [A] Unemployment benefits should not be made conditional.
- [B] The British welfare system indulges jobseekers' laziness.
- [C] The jobseekers' allowance has met their actual needs.
- [D] Osborne's reforms will reduce the risk of unemployment.

3.1

第 1 段：逐句笔译与原文订正

直接在英文上标记主干和逻辑；长句留两行，短句留一行。

S1 In order to "change lives for the better" and reduce "dependency," George Osborne, Chancellor of the Exchequer, introduced the "upfront work search" scheme.

S2 Only if the jobless arrive at the jobcentre with a CV, register for online job search, and start looking for work will they be eligible for benefit-and then they should report weekly rather than fortnightly.

S3 What could be more reasonable?

本段英语原文 (按句分行)

S1 In order to "change lives for the better" and reduce "dependency," George Osborne, Chancellor of the Exchequer, introduced the "upfront work search" scheme.

S2 Only if the jobless arrive at the jobcentre with a CV, register for online job search, and start looking for work will they be eligible for benefit-and then they should report weekly rather than fortnightly.

S3 What could be more reasonable?

段落中心思想 (用一句话概括)

第 2 段：逐句笔译与原文订正

S1 More apparent reasonableness followed.

S1 More apparent reasonableness followed.

S2 There will now be a seven-day wait for the jobseeker's allowance.

S3 "Those first few days should be spent looking for work, not looking to sign on," he claimed.

S4 "We're doing these things because we know they help people stay off benefits and help those on benefits get into work faster." Help?

S5 Really?

S6 On first hearing, this was the socially concerned chancellor, trying to change lives for the better, complete with "reforms" to an obviously indulgent system that demands too little effort from the newly unemployed to find work, and subsidises laziness.

S7 What motivated him, we were to understand, was his zeal for "fundamental fairness"-protecting the taxpayer, controlling spending and ensuring that only the most deserving claimants received their benefits.

S1 More apparent reasonableness followed.

S1 More apparent reasonableness followed.

S2 There will now be a seven-day wait for the jobseeker's allowance.

S3 "Those first few days should be spent looking for work, not looking to sign on," he claimed.

S4 "We're doing these things because we know they help people stay off benefits and help those on benefits get into work faster." Help?

S5 Really?

S6 On first hearing, this was the socially concerned chancellor, trying to change lives for the better, complete with "reforms" to an obviously indulgent system that demands too little effort from the newly unemployed to find work, and subsidises laziness.

S7 What motivated him, we were to understand, was his zeal for "fundamental fairness"-protecting the taxpayer, controlling spending and ensuring that only the most deserving claimants received their benefits.

段落中心思想（用一句话概括）

3.3

第 3 段：逐句笔译与原文订正

直接在英文上标记主干和逻辑；长句留两行，短句留一行。

S1 Losing a job is hurting; you don't skip down to the jobcentre with a song in your heart, delighted at the prospect of doubling your income from the generous state.

S2 It is financially terrifying, psychologically embarrassing and you know that support is minimal and extraordinarily hard to get.

S3 You are now not wanted; you are now excluded from the work environment that offers purpose and structure in your life.

S4 Worse, the crucial income to feed yourself and your family and pay the bills has disappeared.

S5 Ask anyone newly unemployed what they want and the answer is always: a job.

本段英语原文（按句分行）

S1 Losing a job is hurting; you don't skip down to the jobcentre with a song in your heart, delighted at the prospect of doubling your income from the generous state.

S2 It is financially terrifying, psychologically embarrassing and you know that support is minimal and extraordinarily hard to get.

S3 You are now not wanted; you are now excluded from the work environment that offers purpose and structure in your life.

S4 Worse, the crucial income to feed yourself and your family and pay the bills has disappeared.

S5 Ask anyone newly unemployed what they want and the answer is always: a job.

段落中心思想（用一句话概括）

3.4

第 4 段：逐句笔译与原文订正

直接在英文上标记主干和逻辑；长句留两行，短句留一行。

S1 But in Osborneland, your first instinct is to fall into dependency-permanent dependency if you can get it-supported by a state only too ready to indulge your falsehood.

S2 It is as though 20 years of ever-tougher reforms of the job search and benefit administration system never happened.

S3 The principle of British welfare is no longer that you can insure yourself against the risk of unemployment and receive unconditional payments if the disaster happens.

S4 Even the very phrase "jobseeker's allowance" is about redefining the unemployed as a "jobseeker" who had no fundamental right to a benefit he or she has earned through making national insurance contributions.

S5 Instead, the claimant receives a time-limited "allowance," conditional on actively seeking a job; no entitlement and no insurance, at $71.70 a week, one of the least generous in the EU.

本段英语原文（按句分行）

S1 But in Osborneland, your first instinct is to fall into dependency-permanent dependency if you can get it-supported by a state only too ready to indulge your falsehood.

S2 It is as though 20 years of ever-tougher reforms of the job search and benefit administration system never happened.

S3 The principle of British welfare is no longer that you can insure yourself against the risk of unemployment and receive unconditional payments if the disaster happens.

S4 Even the very phrase "jobseeker's allowance" is about redefining the unemployed as a "jobseeker" who had no fundamental right to a benefit he or she has earned through making national insurance contributions.

S5 Instead, the claimant receives a time-limited "allowance," conditional on actively seeking a job; no entitlement and no insurance, at $71.70 a week, one of the least generous in the EU.

段落中心思想（用一句话概括）

4

全文核对后：正式重做 21-25 题

再次独立作答。只看题干和选项；需要时回原文圈出定位句。

21. George Osborne's scheme was intended to

- [A] motivate the unemployed to report voluntarily.
- [B] provide the unemployed with easier access to benefits.
- [C] encourage jobseekers' active engagement in job seeking.
- [D] guarantee jobseekers' legitimate right to benefits.

22. The phrase "to sign on" (Para. 2) most probably means

- [A] to register for an allowance from the government.
- [B] to accept the government's restrictions on the allowance.
- [C] to check on the availability of jobs at the jobcentre.
- [D] to attend a governmental job-training program.

23. What prompted the chancellor to develop his scheme?

- [A] A desire to secure a better life for all.
- [B] An eagerness to protect the unemployed.
- [C] An urge to be generous to the claimants.
- [D] A passion to ensure fairness for taxpayers.

24. According to Paragraph 3, being unemployed makes one feel

- [A] insulted.
- [B] uneasy.
- [C] enraged.
- [D] guilty.

25. To which of the following would the author most probably agree?

- [A] Unemployment benefits should not be made conditional.
- [B] The British welfare system indulges jobseekers' laziness.
- [C] The jobseekers' allowance has met their actual needs.
- [D] Osborne's reforms will reduce the risk of unemployment.

5 原文 D: 第二次做题后定位

先不看解析，回原文再找一次定位句和同义替换。

[P1] In order to "change lives for the better" and reduce "dependency," George Osborne, Chancellor of the Exchequer, introduced the "upfront work search" scheme. Only if the jobless arrive at the jobcentre with a CV, register for online job search, and start looking for work will they be eligible for benefit—and then they should report weekly rather than fortnightly. What could be more reasonable?

[P2] More apparent reasonableness followed. There will now be a seven-day wait for the jobseeker's allowance. "Those first few days should be spent looking for work, not looking to sign on," he claimed. "We're doing these things because we know they help people stay off benefits and help those on benefits get into work faster." Help? Really? On first hearing, this was the socially concerned chancellor, trying to change lives for the better, complete with "reforms" to an obviously indulgent system that demands too little effort from the newly unemployed to find work, and subsidises laziness. What motivated him, we were to understand, was his zeal for "fundamental fairness"—protecting the taxpayer, controlling spending and ensuring that only the most deserving claimants received their benefits.

[P3] Losing a job is hurting: you don't skip down to the jobcentre with a song in your heart, delighted at the prospect of doubling your income from the generous state. It is financially terrifying, psychologically embarrassing and you know that support is minimal and extraordinarily hard to get. You are now not wanted; you are now excluded from the work environment that offers purpose and structure in your life. Worse, the crucial income to feed yourself and your family and pay the bills has disappeared. Ask anyone newly unemployed what they want and the answer is always: a job.

[P4] But in Osborneland, your first instinct is to fall into dependency—permanent dependency if you can get it—supported by a state only too ready to indulge your falsehood. It is as though 20 years of ever-tougher reforms of the job search and benefit administration system never happened. The principle of British welfare is no longer that you can insure yourself against the risk of unemployment and receive unconditional payments if the disaster happens. Even the very phrase "jobseeker's allowance" is about redefining the unemployed as a "jobseeker" who had no fundamental right to a benefit he or she has earned through making national insurance contributions. Instead, the claimant receives a time-limited "allowance," conditional on actively seeking a job; no entitlement and no insurance, at $71.70 a week, one of the least generous in the EU.

全篇压缩与第二天复读

段落	段落功能	一句话压缩（自己写）
P1
P2
P3
P4

全文主题与作者态度（自己写）

第二天复读（不看纸质译文和解析）

- ☐ 我能用 30 秒说清全文主线：
- ☐ 我能遮住答案重做 21-25：
- ☐ 我仍会错 / 不顺的点：
- ☐ 下次遇到相似结构，我要先看：